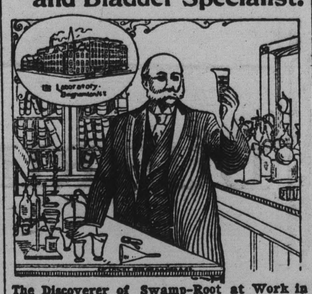
The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.



The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions, which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents. All druggists sell the 50c. size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N.Y.

The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.

With Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh and Hay Fever.

HOW DOES IT SEEM TO YOU?

It seems to me I'd like to go
Where bells don't ring nor whistles blow
Nor clocks don't strike nor gongs don't sound
And I'd have stillness all around.

Not really stillness, but just the trees'
Low whisperings or the hum of bees
Or brooks' faint babbling over stones
In strangely, softly tangled tones.

Or maybe a cricket or katydid
Or the songs of birds in the hedges hid
Or just some such sweet sounds as these
To fill a tired heart with ease.

If 'tweren't for sight and sound and smell,
I'd like a city pretty well,
But when it comes to getting rest
I like the country lots the best.

Sometimes it seems to me I must
Just quit the city's din and dust
And get out where the sky is blue
And say, Now, how does it seem to you?
—Eugene Field.

WITNESS TO THE DEED

BY M. QUAD.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY C. B. LEWIS.

My mistress in Gainsborough road had lost a £5 note in the house, and the thief was the parlor maid. I knew it from her actions, and three months after I left the house she was caught in a similar offense and owned up to the first theft. However, the crime was laid off on me, and because I made indignant and perhaps impudent protest I was flung out of the house at half an hour's notice and refused a character. I was idle for the next three months. The first thing demanded when I applied for a place was a character. As soon as it was learned that I had none it was useless to talk further. It was for this reason that I finally paid a fee to an intelligence office in Margate street and was at length sent for to take a place at general housework. It was an old man named Dyson who wanted me. He was willing to take me without a character because he would have to pay less wages and because, as he grimly asserted, there was nothing lying around loose in his house for one to steal. As we sat face to face I sized him up as mean and penurious, but I did not see any evil in him. He had an aged and infirm wife, he told me, and I would be the only servant.

It was not for me to pick and choose. I must have a place and hold it long enough to get a character again. I went with him miles and miles out on the Holborne road, and we at last arrived at the cheaply built and cheap looking cottage he occupied. It was a place devoid of almost all conveniences and had been selected for its cheap rent. I found the old wife deaf, almost blind and palsied, and it was apparent that she had no care whatever. She had become childish and petulant, and before I had been in the house half an hour Mr. Dyson whipped her with a strap for saying that she was hungry. As he whipped her I saw him look at her in a way to give me a chill. In the course of three or four days I made up my mind that he regarded her with detestation and abhorrence and was hourly hoping for her death. I wondered that he had not pushed her down stairs or found other means to bring about an "accidental" death, but the old man was full of craft and cowardice. I soon had evidence that he was in love with a widow in the neighborhood, or at least he desired to be free so that he could marry her. The man had no occupation and seldom left the house. During my first two weeks in the place he never allowed me to see the wife except in his presence and found fault if I cooked anything extra for her or expressed my sympathy. He had a way of whispering to himself, and a dozen times over I heard him say:

"I've waited for five years, but I won't wait much longer. I'll get rid of her and be happy."

My natural impulse on finding out how he felt toward his wife was to fly the house, but I have explained how I was situated. And, too, I soon got the feeling that I ought to stay to protect the poor old woman. I figured it out that, while he might thirst for her death, he would not proceed to extremities while I was in the house. It seemed as if he would have lived on alone, as he had done for the last two months, if he meditated anything of that sort. I didn't know the depth of his craft, however. He had brought me there to work her death through me. The first thing I suspicioned this way was one morning when he asked me to help her down stairs. The stairs were steep and shaky, and he had pried one of the steps loose, that it might slide from under our feet. As a matter of fact, it did give way, but I caught myself and saved the woman. When old Dyson saw the failure of his plot, he looked chagrined and savage and presently found excuse for cuffing the poor wife's ears.

In the course of a couple of weeks he declared that the cellar was full of rats and gave me money and commanded me to buy arsenic. He recommended me to go to a store miles away and to say that I wanted it for my complexion and to give my own name. I went to a drug store only two blocks away and gave his name, and when he discovered this he was highly indignant for a day, and I rather expected to be thrown out. However, in the course of three or four days he developed another plan. After coaching the old wife he left me alone with her for the first time, and she begged me to get her some laudanum for toothache and not mention the matter to him. It was easy to tell that she had been coached what to say, and I refused to buy the drug. A few days later, as I was preparing her a soup, I had to leave the kitchen for a minute. When I returned, the soup was giving out a strange odor, and, being satisfied that the husband had poisoned it, I of course threw it away. He scolded about my waste, but when I looked him square in the eyes he dropped his and had no more to say.

I had been with the Dysons five weeks when the climax came. The old woman was holding her own, if not getting better, and the husband's impatience had a savage edge to it. Their bedroom was on the north side of the house. All along on that side was a deep excavation for a factory, and the cellar was full of stones and water. From the bedroom window the distance to the cellar bottom was all of 30 feet. I slept on the west side, with two rooms and two doors between us, but so poorly built was the house that if voices were raised above a whisper they could be heard, and there were also many cracks and crevices to peer through. At 10 o'clock one night I lay wondering if he really meant to take her life and how he would finally accomplish it when I heard a half suppressed scream from his room. I got softly out of bed and went to the farther door, and, looking through a crack, I saw that the window was up and that he stood before it with his wife in his arms. She was hanging on to him with fingers of steel and making a great struggle. I heard him breathing heavily and snarling and growling as he tore her fingers loose, but I did not know what he planned to do till of a sudden he staggered to the open window and flung her out. She screamed as she went to her death, and in my fright I echoed the scream. I remember the man rushing across the room at me, of his dashing open the door, of his striking me down, and then came darkness which lasted for weeks. He struck me with a piece of iron and fractured my skull. He then carried my body down stairs and bore it a quarter of a mile away and flung it into another excavation. Before taking me from the house he put on my hat and cloak, and thus it appeared to those who found my unconscious body next morning that I had been coming home the night before and fallen into the pit. As to his wife, he gave the alarm and brought the police and made out that it was a case of suicide. While he was fast asleep, as he claimed, she had stolen to the window and leaped to her death.

His story went, and it was seven months before there was any contradiction.. I had a fractured skull, brain fever and pneumonia and for weeks and weeks lay as one dead. When I mended, my memory was confused, and it was seven months before I told my story and put the police on the track. Long before that Dyson had married the widow and sailed for America, and, though efforts were made to find him, nothing came of them. Never did a man deserve the hangman's rope more, and yet, if living today, he is free and has no fear of the law.

Stood on His Dignity.

A few years ago John Best, the eminent organist, a very dignified man, was present at a great public dinner at Liverpool, and it was understood that he would contribute a short organ recital to the harmony of the evening. "The organ will now play," was the curt style in which the mayor, who was in the chair, chose to announce the performance, and Mr. Best sat still in his place, taking no notice whatever of the observation. The mayor repeated the words in a louder tone of voice, and still the great musician made no sign.

A waiter came and whispered to Mr. Best: "Didn't you hear his worship, sir? The organ will now play." Mr. Best merely looked up with a surprised and injured air. "Confound the organ!" he said. "Let it play!"

The message was duly conveyed to the mayor, and then the mayor rose again. "Our distinguished fellow townsman, Mr. Best," he said, "will now very kindly oblige us with a selection of music on the organ." Then and not before Mr. Best arose and entertained the company.

Mellifluous "Bahoo" English.

The late G. W. Steevens gives an example of "Bahoo" English in his book, "In India." It is an effort to express admiration for the speech of Pundit Madan Mohan Malavayya at a native congress:

"His speech is as mellifluous as his name. He has a sweet voice and is one of the most enthusiastically welcomed of men on the congress platform. Neither tall nor short nor stout, but thin; not dark, dressed in pure white, with a white robe which goes round his shoulders and ends down below the knees, Mr. Madan Mohan stands like Eiffel's tower when he addresses his fellow congressmen.

"He stands slanting forward, admirably preserving his center of gravity. His speeches are full of pellucid and sparkling statements, and his rolling and interminable sentences travel out of his mouth in quick succession, producing a thrilling impression on the audience. There is music in his voice, there is magic in his eye, and he is one of the sweet charmers of the congress company."

Respected His Memory.

She entered the office of the tombstone company, and the clerks immediately became sad of countenance.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" asked the chief mourner.

"Yes; my husband, John T. Abernathy, has died, and I would like to secure some suitably engraved headstone—something with an appropriate inscription, if you please."

"Certainly, madam. Right this way. Now, here is a very pretty thing in the stone line. Right over this cross we would carve, 'Here lies John T. Abernathy, and"—

"Ah, sir," interrupted the widow, "you must think me cruel! I would not say 'Here lies.' That was one of his faults in life, and I will not follow him with the accusation now that he has gone."—Denver Times.

The Christmas Table.

There is no place where bad taste betrays itself so quickly as in the arrangement of a table. It is usually evident, when it exists, in the ornaments. Ill assorted nosegays and bouquets of artificial flowers are clearly out of place. But family plate, whether carved, chased or plain, is always proper on a table on any occasion. In dessert service, rich, handsomely designed cut glass is appropriate. Foliage and moss, in which fruit is sometimes imbedded, have a pleasing appearance to the diners. White damask of rich design and fine quality is absolutely necessary at a pretentious dinner party.

Now thrice welcome, Christmas,
Which brings us good cheer,

We deck up our houses

SONOMA, DECEMBER 15, 1900.

H. H. GRANICE - - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

A SONOMA correspondent of the Santa Rosa Republican, in mentioning the printing of the revised ordinances of this city in pamphlet form, tries to create the impression that the editor of this paper is endeavoring to get the City Trustees to allow him to do the work in order to make up any loss that may be incurred in publishing the revised ordinances at the present contract price. The fact of the matter is that the proposition to print the ordinances in pamphlet form came from the Trustees themselves. At the request of Joe B. Small, Clerk of the Board of City Trustees, this paper which is the official newspaper of the city, submitted a written proposition to the Board to advertise the ordinances and print 150 copies in pamphlet form for $50. The work is well worth $150 and any newspaper publisher in the county will so decide when it is known that the ordinances in question will take up twenty-two columns of space in the INDEX-TRIBUNE, and printed in pamphlet form will make fifty 9x6 pages. As the City Trustees were elected to conduct the affairs of this city on business principles, for the life of us we cannot see how they can reject an offer that gives the city $150 worth of needed service for $50.

MRS. JOHN S. TAYLOR, who was arrested on complaint of Prof. D. E. Martin, a prominent teacher of Santa Rosa, charged with battery, was acquitted in Judge Brown's court in that city last Saturday. Mrs. Taylor's offense was horse-whipping the Professor on the public streets of Santa Rosa for chastising her fourteen-year-old son, who became unruly in the school room. As the Professor was arrested and acquitted for whipping the lad the case now stands "horse and horse."

THE Calistogian entered upon its twenty-fourth volume last Saturday. Mr. C. A. Carroll, the editor and proprietor, is giving the people of Calistoga a newspaper that is in every way worthy of their support regardless of politics and religious creed. It leaves these matters wholly in the hands of the ministers and politicians, and stands for the progress and prosperity of its town and its people. Brother Carroll, and we wish you sucess.

A WASHINGTON physician declares that kerosene oil, as refined by modern methods, develops a deadly gas if the lamp is turned low, and may be fatal to young children. If this be really true, something should be done about it. The use of lamps turned down low is very prevalent in sick rooms and children's rooms.

AN opinion has been rendered by District Attorney Webber that the city of Petaluma is not liable for the cost of keeping prisoners sent to jail for breaking the State laws. She muzt compensate the county, however, for the board of prisoners sentenced to the County Jail for violating city ordinances.

THE OBSERVER.

Greatest Book of the Century.

In a symposium entitled "The Greatest Books of the Century," The Outlook presents the several opinions of the following men upon what, in their judgment, are the ten books of the Nineteenth century that have most influenced its thought and activities:

James Bryce, author of "The American Commonwealth.
Edward E. Hale, author of "The Man Without a Country."
Henry Van Dyke, Professor of English Literature at Princeton.
T. W. Higginson, author and lecturer.
George A. Gordon, Pastor of the Old South Church, Boston.
Arthur T. Hadley, President of Yale University.
W. DeWett Hyde, President of Bowdoin College.
A. M. Fairbairn, Principal of Mansfield College, Oxford.
Wm. J. Tucker, President of Dartmouth College.
G. Stanley Hall, President of Clark University.

There are few who would deny that these men are fairly representative of the best life and thought in the United States and England. They are perhaps as thoroughly in touch with the spirit of the century as any other ten men that could be named. And in a vote of this character the personnel of the electors is highly important. University Presidents are not chosen by chance and authors do not achieve world-wide reputation on a basis of misinformation. They occupy their respective positions because they understand and are able to interpret the subtile and far-reaching impulses of their time. They are awake to the many voices of this great world. So we may accept their opinions with a very considerable degree of assurance that they are just.

If no two or more of these men had named the same book or books there would have been one hundred books named. As it is, forty-five were named. These may be roughly and broadly classified as follows: Philosophy, 20; history, 6; fiction, 6; poetry, 6; science, 2; economics, 2.

Twenty-seven of the books received one vote apiece, four received two apiece, and, letting the authors stand for their books, Compte, Spencer, Straus, Hugo and Ruskin received three votes apiece. Wadsworth, Scott, Tennyson, each received four votes. Carlyle, Emerson, Harriet Beecher Stowe, each received five votes. Gœthe received six; Hegel eight. "The Origin of Species" by Charles Darwin was the only book that received the vote of each man, ten.

When ten such men of diverse religious beliefs and occupations unanimously declare a book to be of prime importance it is certainly worth while to know something about it. James Bryce says of "The Origin of Species": "It has done more to turn the current of speculative thought in general, as well as to cast light on the most difficult problems of natural history than any other book within the last hundred years." It is the first great laboratory demonstration of the truth of the Doctrine of Evolution. This doctrine Huxley defined to be "a natural history of the cosmos including organic beings, expressed in physical terms as a mechanical process. * * The various grades of life on our planet are the natural consequences of certain physical processes involved in the gradual transformations of the earth." Or, again: "Evolution as at present employed in biology is a general name for the history of the steps by which any living being has acquired the morphological and the physiological characters which distinguish it." Henry Drummond says simply it is: "A general name for the history of the steps by which the world has come to be what it is." However, these definitions may be too simple. Here is Herbert Spencer's: "Evolution is a change from an indefinite coherent heterogeneity to a definite coherent heterogeneity through continuous differentiations and integrations." Concerning this definition the Contemporary Reviewer remarked that "the universe may well have heaved a sigh of relief when, through the cerebration of an eminent thinker, it had been delivered of this account of itself."

In the following extract from his "Life and Letters" Darwin tells us how the idea of the book came to him: "During the voyage of the Beagle I had been deeply impressed by discovering in the Pampean formation great fossil animals, covered with armour like that of the existing armadillos; secondly, by the manner in which closely allied animals replace one another in proceeding southwards over the continent; and thirdly, by the South American character of most of the productions of the Galapagos Archipelago, and more especially by the manner in which they differ slightly on each island of the group; none of the islands appearing to be very ancient in a geological sense.

It was evident that such facts as these, as well as many others, could only be explained on the supposition that species gradually become modified; and the subject haunted me."

Again, he modestly explains his success. "My success as a man of science, whatever this may have amounted to, has been determined as far as I can judge by complex and diversified mental qualities and conditions. Of these the most important have been the love of science, unbounded patience in long reflecting over any subject, industry in observing and collecting facts, and a fair share of invention as well as common sense. With such moderate abilities as I possess, it is truly surprising that I should have influenced to a considerable extent the belief of scientific men on some important points."

The style of Darwin's writings is remarkable for the absence of all affectation, of all attempt at epigram, literary allusion or rhetoric. Technical terms are not used in place of ordinary language. The greatest pains are obviously given by the author to enable the reader to thoroughly understand the matter in hand. The result is that his books are eminently readable.

Her Kingdom.

A fair domain
Wherein by love not fear
She e'er doth reign.

Her gracious mien,
And pure and noble soul
Proclaim her queen;

Sharer of a throne,
With one whose heart doth beat
For her alone.

Her subjects loyal,
Bow cheerfully before
Her mandates royal.

Her priceless pearls,
Her honest sturdy lads,
Her lovely girls.

No diamond star,
Shines on her brow, their lips
More precious are,

Than rarest gems.
So prized by monarch in
Their diadems.

She oft doth wear,
Of little tender arms,
A necklace fair.

What more than this,
Can woman's fond heart crave,
What greater bliss?

Blest from above,
With joy she wears her crown,
A crown of love.

Consumption

is destruction of lung by a growing germ, precisely as moldy cheese is destruction of cheese by a growing germ.

If you kill the germ, you stop the consumption. You can or can't, according to when you begin.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil: take a little at first.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

It acts as a food; it is the easiest food. Seems not to be food; makes you hungry; eating is comfortable. You grow stronger. Take more; not too much; enough is as much as you like and agrees with you. Satisfy hunger with usual food; whatever you like and agrees with you.

When you are strong again, have recovered your strength---the germs are dead; you have killed them.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

COUGHS KILL

We know of nothing better than coughing to tear the lining of your throat and lungs. It is better than wet feet to cause bronchitis and pneumonia. Only keep it up and you will succeed in reducing your weight, losing your appetite, bringing on a slow fever, and making everything exactly right for the germs of consumption. Better kill your cough before it kills you.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

kills coughs of every kind. A 25 cent bottle is just right for an ordinary cough; for the harder coughs of bronchitis you will need a 50 cent bottle; and for the coughs of consumption the one dollar size is most economical.

"My cough reduced me to a mere skeleton. I tried many remedies, but they all failed. After using the Cherry Pectoral I immediately began to improve, and three bottles restored me to health. I believe I owe my life to it."
SARAH F. MORGAN,
Oct. 7, 1898. Browntown, Va.

How to Cure Croup.

Mr. R. Gray, who lives near Amenia, Duchess county, N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of the Cough Remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear. For sale by F. Duhring. *

The Best Prescription Is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic.

The Formula Is Plainly Printed on Every Bottle, So That the People May Know Just What They Are Taking.

Imitators do not advertise their formula knowing that you would not buy their medicine if you knew what it contained. Grove's contains Iron and Quinine put up in correct proportions and is in a Tasteless form. The Iron acts as a tonic while the Quinine drives the malaria out of the system. Any reliable druggist will tell you that Grove's is the Original and that all other so-called "Tasteless" chill tonics are imitations. An analysis of other chill tonics shows that Grove's is superior to all others in every respect. You are not experimenting when you take Grove's—its superiority and excellence having long been established. The weather the past week has been the most disagreeable experienced in this valley for a number of years. For the most part the sun has been obscured by a penetrating fog that gives one the cold shivers, and makes the wood pile look as though some one had been raiding it.

Now that the cold weather is with us and Christmas is near one of the most acceptable gifts to give your good wife or sweetheart would be a nice buggy robe. The finest line of robes, woolen and plush, are to be seen at Chas. H. Wilsons, Petaluma. Prices the lowest and quality guaranteed. *

Joe. Kiser, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kiser, residing in the eastern suburbs of town, is recovering from an attack of typhoid fever, which for many weeks threatened to prove fatal. Mrs. Kiser, the mother, while waiting on her afflicted son, was also stricken down with the dreaded disease. She, too is now out of danger. The attending physician, Dr. Rich, informs us that both will be able to be up and around in a very short time.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and la grippe during the past few years, to our knowledge, not a single case has resulted in pneumonia. Thos. Whitfield & Co., 240 Wabash avenue, Chicago, one of the most prominent retail druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for la grippe in many cases, as it not only gives prompt and complete recovery, but also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia." For sale by F. Duhring. *

BEET CULTURE ON THE JONES RANCH.

Eight Hundred Acres Leased to the Reclamation Company.

What is known as the upper Jones ranch, comprising eight hundred acres, has been leased by Senator Jones' manager Wm. Hamilton, to the beet sugar company of Reclamation. The land is located near Schellville and is admirably adapted to the cultivation of the beet. The entire tract will be planted this season and will no doubt produce an immense crop of sugar beets.

Last year a large portion of the Rose ranch at Reclamation was seeded to beets, but the crop was a partial failure, owing to the seed being planted too late in the season. This year the beet company will profit by last season's experience and will get their land plowed and seeded much earlier. As it was, however, thousands of tons of beets were shipped from the Rose ranch to San Francisco last fall.

Beet culture on the reclaimed marsh lands in the lower part of the Sonoma Valley is only in its experimental stage and is being watched with a great deal of interest by the owners of unreclaimed lands bordering on Sonoma creek and San Pablo Bay. Should the venture prove a financial success thousands upon thousands of acres of tule lands will be reclaimed and turned into beet farms.

THE STORM.

House Demolished by a Falling Tree.

The storm which sat in last Thursday night developed into a perfect hurricane for a short time yesterday morning. The wind blew with tremendous force and the rain came down in torrents. Considerable damage resulted in different parts of the valley. On J. B. Morris' ranch at Agua Caliente a large gum tree was prostrated by the high wind and striking the Morris residence literally cut it in two. Fortunately the inmates escaped injury. Chimneys, fencing and outbuildings were blown down in different part of the valley and other damage done. The storm was the severest experienced in this valley in a long time.

Broke a Rib.

Matt Watt, while pruning trees on his ranch near Schellville, last Tuesday, fell from a step-ladder and broke one of his ribs. After receiving the fall he picked himself up and continued to work right along, congratulating himself that he had escaped injury. An hour or so afterward, however, he was seized with a pain in his side and Dr. Rich was sent for who discovered the broken rib. The injury is not considered dangerous, although it will compel Mr. Watt to keep quiet for some little time.

To Visit His Old Home.

Thos. S. Cooper, who left this place for Outlook, Yakima county, Washington, six or eight years ago, is expected to arrive in town today. Mr. Cooper returns to Sonoma to pay a short visit with relatives, after which he will return to Washington, where he is successfully engaged in farming and stock-raising.

Chinese Found Dead

A Chinese laborer, who for many years has worked on various ranches in this valley, was found dead on the Morris ranch near this place Wednesday night. He died of old age. The remains were taken to Santa Rosa yesterday and interred in the Potter's field of that city.

Need we remind you what Christmas means to a child? Health in the Pines.

Kinney's Rheumatic and Kidney Remedy—"K. R. K. R."—an infallible remedy for rheumatism, diseases of the kidneys and bladder, sciatica and heart trouble. A California remedy, composed of the pure essential oils of the buds of our forest trees; pine, etc. together with the extract of a plant healing in its nature; clear as crystal, chemically pure; small doses giving quick relief, and, in most all cases, a radical and final cure. The healing medicinal properties of these buds are wonderful. Taken internally, this remedy will expel the poison urea, uric acid and vitiated phoshatic salts, the causes of rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica and inflammation of the lining membrane of the heart, or heart trouble. Will prevent the change of the pure constituents of the urine into the poison sediments, stop the production of albumen, the cause of Bright's disease; will expel the saccharine matter, the cause of diabetes; stop the pain in the back and sciatic nerves; heal and allay irritation and inflammation of the kidneys and urinary passage; rectify incontinence and retention of urine, prostatic trouble; eliminate the calculus sand and gravel and stop their further production. The ever increasing sales of this remedy throughout California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Arizona, Montana and so many states east, is the evidence of its genuine merit. Price $1.25 per bottle, (60 days treatment). Sent by mail or express in metal case. Enclose 25cts. in stamps for trial bottle, (10 days treatment), sent by mail.

IN THE FORUM OF JUSTICE.

Pass, pass, pass! Thou hast had thine hour
To sow in and reap. Is it thistle or flower?
'Tis the seed is at fault, though Jove's hand
Staid the shower.
Make way for thy comrade with double thy dower.

Halt, halt, halt! There was given thee grace
To begin with the best and their records efface.
Had thy sandals been winged. Step down from the race;
One swifter than thou art would run in thy place.

Cease, cease, cease! Thou hast had thy chance.
Must a Pallas attend thee to ward off mischance?
Let fall thy vain weapon; a thousand advance
To rush on and conquer with thy broken lance.

BY THE LYCH GATE

A Story of One Who Married For Wealth and Beauty.

There is a valley amid the Yorkshire hills known as Coverdale, from whose slopes, long years ago, came pious Miles, who translated the Bible, and who was called by the simple folk Miles of Coverdale, after the place of his birth.

Very calm and peaceful the little dale lies under the shadow of the great hills, whose summits are purple in the sweet summertide with their royal mantle of fragrant heather, and where the curlew and the golden plover's cry alone break the gentle stillness that rests over the little world beyond the haunts of restless activity and hurrying life.

There is no railway in quiet Coverdale, no town to which the country folk may wend their way, no shops save the wonderful village emporium, where everything in a very small way may be obtained, but where few fashions come to startle the gayer minded of the maidens, or strange new devices in neckties to dazzle the vision of the country lads.

To peep into the world necessitates a journey under the shelter of the lone hillsides, along bonny lanes, intwined with pink and creamy tinted honeysuckle, and green with waving ferns; past the quaint inn, whose sign is a famous but long ago race horse, called in the canny Yorkshire tongue the Lady Bab, and, finally, across the moor into horse loving Middleham, where are people and shops, and many inns with curiously painted signposts—the Black Swan and its brother, the White Swan, and many others too.

But down in Coverdale there is a beautiful old church, set like a jewel in its surrounding of stately trees and blossoming hedges, with the quiet greenness of God's acre lying stretched about it, and the singing of nature's choristers in the sweet air around—a place of peacefulness and repose, where earth's burdens may fall from one for a little space and heaven's benison light softly on such of its children as stay to pray and think awhile.

There is a quaint lych gate at the entrance to the holy spot, a carved halting place of oak, set tenderly by some good man of the dalespeople—a squire of the olden days, who loved his home and his neighbors and his God full well, I think, and sought to beautify the church in which he and his had worshiped so long.

And down the fair avenue of trees within the precincts and past the quiet church lie the remains of what was once the proud abbey of Coverdale, where the monks said masses and cultivated their garden and tended the souls and bodies of the poor and needy in the dale.

It is a beautiful spot in a beautiful countryside, and so thought a man who viewed it lovingly and pointed out all its changeful lights and shadows and all its pretty peeps of field and river to his wife.

They had only been married a little while, a few short weeks, and had elected to spend their honeymoon in some of the quaint corners of England; hence their journeying thither to this sequestered nook among the hills and the far stretched moorlands in their veiling of regal purple. The man loved it already with the artist love which sees the beautiful so quickly and feels it so strongly, and the woman—well, she saw the beauties, too, but she was growing a little weary of pretty sights, and she was very pretty and spoiled herself and perhaps a little jealous of admiration wasted which might have been diverted homeward.

So she stood by the quaint relics of the abbots and mailed knights at Coverdale, where two quaint forms guard a doorway as perchance their originals guarded some stronghold in the old fighting days long gone, and her white gown fell over the gray stones and gleamed against the red and orange nasturtiums in the garden which surrounds the old walls and arches, and she wondered if her husband had nearly finished his sketch and whether they should stay at Middleham for a day or two or go on farther to Wensleydale.

"I am rather tired of admiring places," she said to herself a little impatiently, "and, then, I never can remember who lived in the castles and abbeys. How uncomfortable they must have been!"

And then—for she was only a very young bride, too—she felt sorry for having been impatient, even in her thoughts, toward her husband, and she turned to speak to him with an even sweeter smile than usual on her pretty lips, for her husband was a genius in his way, a thinker and an author, and every one had envied her when she married him in spite of her wealth.

Ah, there was a pitiful ring in the story—poor and nameless, but clever; beating himself to pieces in his eager attempts to win fame single handed, and rich and beautiful the woman with the fairylike figure and exquisite face who had given the man her gold.

And, ah, a more pitiful note still, and the man remembers that some one has once long ago talked of this very spot, with its quaint surroundings and its old world atmosphere, in the time that might have been and is not.

He closed his sketchbook, with a sigh, and turned to the white robed loveliness of his wife with a murmured apology for having kept her waiting, and then together they passed down the avenue that leads to the road again.

But he was very silent, and his wife felt tired and just a little cross. She liked to be petted and coaxed and flattered, and latterly Wilfred had been too serious to suit her gay fancies and too absorbed in new ideas for his book to pay her the attentions she loved so dearly to exact from every man and especially from her husband.

"Let us go home to town," she said suddenly. "I am so tired of roaming in this out of the way place, Wilfred, and there is still so much going on, I hear. You must have got lots of ideas now, I am sure." She laughed gleefully as she spoke. The murmur of the streets seemed already in her ears, and the flash of silks and jewels came over the sunlight on the grass.

He paused a moment. "Will you not come on a little farther?" he asked kindly, yet a little wistfully. "There are some lovely places in the dale, and you would be interested in them, I think."

But she shook her head until the diamonds in her little ears twinkled like dewdrops. "You know I am not interested," she said petulantly. "I hate those old people who perched castles on the tops of hills and expect you to climb up to see them. Do let us go back."

They had reached the lych gate now, and a girl was entering it from the other side, where their carriage—his wife's carriage—with its beautiful bays, stood waiting. The sunlight fell on her quiet black gown and her soft hair as she passed under the quaint oaken structure, and then she lifted her eyes, and a sudden light flashed into them and then died very gently again.

The man's face grew white in the shadow of the leafy elms, but his wife chattered on in her high, pretty voice and noticed nothing of his pallor. And then, as they met, he advanced quietly to meet the girl as quietly as if they had never parted in bitter, bitter sorrow, the one brave and ready to sacrifice herself for his sake, the other, as he said to himself bitterly enough, a coward and a craven. And now they met again in the soft sunshine of the autumn day, with the first few leaves falling, golden tinted, from the trees around, with the blue, bright sky overhead and the purling of a little stream somewhere near, under the old gateway that leads to the house of prayer.

She spoke to him very calmly and quietly, and he introduced her to his lovely wife, and she told the stranger at once in her pretty, petulant voice of her wish to go back to town and its gayeties, only Wilfred wouldn't, he was so cross.

But the girl smiled so gently and spoke so soothingly that the little lady's wrath melted away, and she laughed like a merry child and straightway invited her new friend to pay them a visit in town.

"We will go tomorrow, won't we, Wilfred?" she said laughingly, and the grave faced man answered that her will was law.

"Yes; we will go tomorrow," he said when the girl had answered that she never went to town now. Her father was old and needed her care, and she was quite content with her life in the still countryside.

"I have him, and he has me," she said, with her peaceful smile, and the laughing woman before her could not guess and would never have realized that this gentle faced girl had loved the man beside her with all her heart and soul and had passed through the deep waters alone with her sorrow to take up her life again bravely and well.

And then one of the beautiful horses claimed the pretty wife's attention, and she went hurriedly on, leaving the two together for a brief moment in the sunshine of the old gate.

"Forgive me, Enid!" he said brokenly. "Ah, I have wronged you so, and I deserve your hatred, but forgive me if you can!"

His face was haggard, and his lips whitened and trembled as he spoke the few strained words.

But she laid her hand in his very gently, as if to say goodby to a dear, dear friend forever. "I have forgiven you, dear," she said. "I may call you that for this one last time? I have forgiven you everything, and God keep you, keep you safely and lead you aright!" She paused, and the great tears rose in her calm eyes and rolled down the pale cheeks. She loved him so well still, and the meeting and the parting were very hard to bear.

And then, with one last look, she passed on into the loneliness of the still graveyard and the quiet dead.—Exchange.

Abyssinians Expert at Thatching.

In describing Abyssinia and its strange capital a writer in Pearson's tells of its mushroom growth as follows: A crowd of workers appears with loads of sticks some 12 feet high. These are planted in the ditch to erect the walls, and a few more sticks are twisted in and out to keep them together. Now comes the preparation of the roof. A number of men climb up inside and bind together more sticks like the frame of an umbrella. As soon as these are in position they clamber outside like monkeys and set to work to thatch. For this purpose they bring great bundles of hay and twine it between the sticks. They are not an artistic nation, and they have next to no industries, but at thatching they are really expert, and they turn out work which would call for admiration even in a civilized country. They do not trouble to produce an elegant finish, but this often adds to the picturesqueness of a cottage.

A Minister's Mistake.

A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a newspaper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best cough cure." This was hardly what he expected and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over, and found on the other side the matter intended for the reading.

The Irl R. Hicks 1901 Almanac

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R. Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the Gulf coast. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published, is now ready. This remarkable book of near 200 pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company, 2101 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Her Husband's Story

"My name is E. J. Sprong, and my address is 16 Bondman Block, Troy, N. Y. I want to tell how thankful I am that my wife's health has been restored to her. About a year ago she caught a dreadful cold, which settled in her bronchial tubes and lungs. She certainly had bronchitis, and I think consumption, too, and we despaired of her life. She had a tightness and soreness in the chest, and it was difficult for her to breathe. There were darting, sharp, dull and heavy pains, with constant coughing and expectorating. Each day she was worse than the day before. I was advised to get Acker's English Remedy, and did so, but my wife only shook her head and said: 'Another dollar thrown away.' She took the Remedy, however, and said the effect was magical. In less than an hour there was a remarkable change. She got better at once, and in a short time she was entirely well and strong again. The cure was permanent and there has been no relapse. I don't know what Acker's English Remedy is made of, but I am sure it contains something that fortifies the system against future attacks. My wife is in better general health now than ever, and you can't imagine how happy she is for her recovery. She tells everybody about Acker's English Remedy, and so do I, for I believe it to be our duty to the public to help every sufferer who has throat and lung troubles. My neighbors say it is a sure specific for croup, and has saved the lives of hundreds of little ones around in this vicinity alone."
